

BACHELOR

TOURISM AND LEISURE MANAGEMENT

How do you stage an event and what challenges are involved? You'll work on these and other business-related questions in our full-time or part-time bachelor programme. Electives to choose:

- Hospitality Consulting
- Destination Consulting
- Adventure, events and sports tourism
- Global wellness and spa management
- Congress, events and conference management

SPECIAL FEATURES

Studying the international way

Linguistically, you'll grow by leaps and bounds by perfecting your English skills – after all, the lectures are held in English. In addition, you'll learn or further improve another foreign language during your degree, choosing between Spanish or French (part-time) plus Italian, Russian or Chinese (full-time). You can also go abroad with the option of spending semester 3 (full-time) or semesters 3 and 4 (part-time) at one of our 140 partner universities – the perfect opportunity to further develop your cross-cultural skills.

Ideally equipped for the globalised world

While you're still at university, you'll cultivate contacts with important representatives of the tourism industry – during the excursion to ITB Berlin in semester 3 or an optional excursion to the IMEX Future Leaders Forum in semester 6, for instance. And lectures in Krems are held by experts in their field, who incorporate lots of practical examples and projects. Your training will be concluded with a sharp focus on an increasingly important set of soft skills. They'll help you to become a confident and self-assured tourism professional. In seminars and workshops, you'll develop your presentation, negotiation and sales skills as well as explore teambuilding methods. You'll also learn to set your own personal goals and to rigorously pursue them. In addition, you and your fellow part-time students will spend two fascinating weeks abroad visiting first-class innovative tourism companies. Two courses complement this intensive week, helping you to consolidate your cross-cultural skills and to gain an even better understanding of the travel industry.

Discover your interests

One in ten jobs worldwide is directly linked to tourism – a good argument for pursuing a career in this sector. The Krems bachelor programme centres on the operational aspects of this fast-growing industry. In addition to general lectures on the tourism industry, towards the end of your studies you'll delve into specialised areas of tourism and leisure. In addition to general lectures on the tourism industry such as Event Management or Sustainability in Tourism in semester 5 you choose between two areas of specialisation: Hospitality Consulting or Destination Consulting. In semester 6 you can choose between the following electives: Adventure, Event- and Sports tourism; Wellness and Spa Management; and Congress, Events and Conference Management.

TO WORK IN THE
INTERNATIONAL
TOURISM INDUSTRY
YOU NEED A LOT
OF PASSION,
FLEXIBILITY AND EMPATHY.

INES

A VERY PERSONAL STORY

In 2008, Ines Lochmann graduated from Tourism and Leisure Management. The German-born is already holding the position of Director of Human Resources. She likes Austria so much that after a few years in the country she already feels like a native. Her favourite ways to keep fit include marathon running and boxing.

Good reputation opens many doors

I had already acquired a hotelier qualification in Germany before I applied to study at IMC Krems. The programme in Krems was a perfect add-on, because it was in English, and because I was also able to study two more foreign languages. Of course, I've also benefited from getting to know my colleagues – I still meet up with them and we share our experiences. The IMC Alumni Network is well organised.

From Berlin to Krems

Moving from Berlin to Krems was no easy decision, but I got to know a lot of people and from the very first day I was part of the group. I integrated very quickly – learning the various Austrian dialects. When I receive applications from IMC Krems graduates or students for internships or an advertised position at the hotel, I immediately feel a connection. I know how intensive the programme was, but that you also get a high-quality education.

Intensive, emotional and open-minded

At my first job interview after completing my degree, they said: 'You know that you've studied at the best university of applied sciences for the tourism industry in Austria.' At the time, I didn't realise that IMC Krems was held in such esteem. The university's good reputation has opened many doors for me. If I had to describe my degree programme in three words, I would choose: intensive – because it was a real challenge; emotional – because there were ups and downs, but we went through them together; and open-minded – thanks to the internship and numerous international experiences.

Tip

The service industry requires much passion, empathy and flexibility. It is important to be aware that this is a highly demanding field to work in, but it is also very rewarding – on a human level.

MICHAEL

A VERY PERSONAL STORY

Vienna-born Michael Abzalov grew up trilingually because his father is Russian, his mother Hungarian. Michael worked as a professional ballet dancer during the last years.

From Moscow, Lisbon and Bratislava to Austria

I was the first Austrian to complete the ballet education at the Moscow Bolshoi Theatre. So far, I have lived three years in Moscow, one year in Lisbon and four years in Bratislava. However, I have decided to retire early as a dancer and study in Austria. This is where I love to be; Austria feels like home to me.

Event management aroused my interest

In addition to ballet, event management aroused my interest already during my school time, when I worked for a company that organises events on a worldwide basis. My job at the Champions League Final 2013 in London was a life-changing experience. I had a management position in catering – a unique experience. What I like most about event management is to coordinate the work of various people involved – from caterers to florists. Meanwhile I have started to work for an event company again.

During my studies, I learn the basics and gain the necessary expertise for my profession. What I found most appealing is that the tourism programme is offered in English. This will enable me to work in event management worldwide. In addition, I can gain competence in fields such as marketing, accounting or even soft skills.

Working and studying

My employer and I have agreed that I study on a part-time basis. This is no problem at all because in the event business my working hours are very flexible. My family fully understands my decision to study because I am already working in the event business. I am sure that event management is the right business for me. However, I am not fixed on a certain subject area.

Tip

After your school-leaving examination, really think twice about whether you are passionate about what you do. If you enjoy your work, it is less exhausting, and you will cope much better with stress.
